Twenty hardy people braved the weather at our February outing at the Lake Point RV Resort in Eufaula, Alabama.

They definitely weren't disappointed, as early Friday morning beautiful, big, soft flakes of snow began falling. Before long, Eufaula and the surrounding area were winter wonderlands. When talking with locals, we found the last time they had snow in Eufaula was in 1993. "WELCOME TO THE SUNNY SOUTH!," they said. They were enjoying the snow, too.

Jesse Chambless toured Eufaula in the snow

What could have been better for the Friday evening meal than homemade vegetable beef soup made by our hosts. And to make it even better, we had hot cornbread muffins! Thanks, JoAn and Patricia!

Saturday breakfast was sausage, sausage gravy, scrambled eggs, biscuits and coffee. . m - m - m - m - m!

An unusually interesting business meeting followed breakfast where we discussed, and made plans to implement, some items new to our chapter. Check the minutes for details.

Saturday noon and afternoon we were on our own, but for the evening meal we had ham and all the trimmings. The Blankenships and Heaths were great hosts.

After a continental breakfast Sunday morning we had devotions lead by Jesse Chambless. Then each headed toward home, trying to get ahead of the predicted snow.

HISTORIC HOUSES ARE EUFAULA'S PRIDE AND JOY

Trivia Question: Where did Eufaula get its name? Answer: From one of the three Creek Indian tribes that lived in the area around 1733. They were called (you guessed it) The Eufaulas (pronounced "you-fall-uhs.") I didn't know that, did you?

GONE WITH THE WINNIES ENJOY THE SNOW

Ronnie Padgett, JoAn Blankenship and Patricia Heath made a snowman

but they needed help from Ricky to get it over a big root

All in all, I think it turned out pretty well, don't you?
